

Aga Khan III (H H) (1877 - 1957)

Breeder (B), Owner (O)

Also Known As: Aga Sultan Sir Mahomed Shaix

Description:

The Aga Khan was leading owner on the British turf thirteen times and, in eight seasons, the leading breeder. He studied bloodstock breeding for nearly 20 years, and his knowledge combined with his fabulous wealth enabled him to found a racing empire which had no equal. However, to him this was no sport, but a hard-headed business in which sentiment played no part. Many of his best winners were sold abroad without compunction. Tulyar, his 1952 Classic success, was bred in partnership with his son, Prince Aly Khan.

In addition to his English Classic successes, the Aga Khan won two Ascot Gold Cups, two Prix de l'Arc de Triomphe, a Grand Prix de Paris and thirteen Irish classics.

The Aga Khan had succeeded his father Aly Shah as the Imam of the Ismaili sect of the Shia Muslims; his father had moved to Bombay during civil unrest in his own country. The Aga Khan raced throughout Western India and saw the Derby on his first visit to England, deciding to take up European racing via his friendship with Lord Wavertree. Intense study of racing in England and France was followed by the acquisition of yearlings on his behalf by Hon George Lambton, which, together with his studs in Ireland and France quickly became the largest racing empire of its period.
